GOD'S INTERFER

Snotty Penfold— You've never seen anything like this. I was at the game between Death's Hand and the Deadmonton Soil King's, first thing's first there was a blizzard in the desert. I thought this was weird and I was under dressed for the weather.

The first half was great, even though players were pushing the extra yard, no one seem to be effected by the weather, it was surreal to watch. The Soil King's were able to get their cage going, while the Hand dodged and danced away from hits. It was about half way through the first half when the Hand knocked the ball loose, they all most scored but Scyth dropped the pass as the blizzard was too much for the Dark Elf.

At the end of the first half the score was 0-0, the teams went to the dressing room and a prayer must have been said , or a sacrifice.

As the Dark Elves were set up to receive the kick, they got the step on the Soil Kings and took off down field, Malacus picked the ball off and threw a short pass to Asmodayis, who ran up the side line. The elf screen wasn't strong enough to hold off the Soil Kings, as Sternum broke through and sent Asmodayis into the crowd,. Thinking they had the edge the crowd threw the ball into the centre of the pitch, this is where the game got crazy.

I've never believed that the gods would/could interfere in a game, but they did, Malacus picked the ball up and pushed the extra yard, and then the skies parted, a ray of nice weather split through the blizzard as a Long bomb pass was sent through the air into Scyth's Hands in the endzone. The gods' literally interfered to give the Hand the lead, lucky the game wasn't spoiled as the Soil Kings were able to tie the game up.

This reporter has never seen anything like this before, And I'll be attending the temples for the rest of the year.

Who's Block is it anyways?

No one thought the a rookie Brettonian team could or would do as well as this, but to everyone surprise, they've on fire! In the first three weeks they've yet to loose, and have yet to give up a touch down. These Knights have come to play and that they are doing, scoring 11 touch downs in the first 3 weeks.

The team is being led by Ryan "hates hoedowns" Stiles, he seems to be the leading factor in every game, with 6 touch downs and 3 casualties, He's been a thorn in his opponents sides, the question is how long can he keep this pace up? Coach Joldersma had this to say when asked what the key to Stiles success is "He thinks on his feet, and reacts to well to those around him. It takes a special kind of person to make those around him better" His team mates

"I Stitch em up, sew arms back on, and put bones back together"

seem to think a lot of him as well. "Stiles has some rhythm to his game, it's like he's singing out there, he's one of the funniest guys in the dressing room, which helps keep the mood light" said Brady.

This team isn't just a threat on the score board they're tied for first in casualties as well, This has made the Soil Kings upset as they've pride themselves a bash team.

The real key is that the team hasn't suffered any long term injuries, a healthy team has a good chance to do great things. But if players start to fall then their record could be right behind them.

Until that point this team is the favorite to win the BKBBL this season, their poise on and off the pitch is ranked #1.

Wow dis gobo impression is good of da Slakaz! Dem sit in third place of da division and dem lookin good dis season. I watch'd dem beat da Chargers a sticky and fearsome High Elf team, dat tot we gonna win dis game as dees little green guys are too small. Dat no true dem big, big deal dem are! Den dem took out da Shrikins a dirty rat team. Dis is great season for da Slakaz, watch every game I do!

THE HIGH ELVISH VIEW!

When I was sent to cover the BKBBL, I expected to see pretty much the same Blood Bowl we play on Ulthuan. Nothing could have been farther from the truth! So far, casualties outnumber completions and so far there's a death every two games! The Death's Hand, sadists and torturers that they are, seem to be thriving in this environment, leading the Orca Cola division.

But fret not, O Ulthuan! There are bastions of true play in this league yet. The Avalorn Angels have fought their way through injury and dismemberment to a decent standing, and the Tiranoc Chargers do us proud by outscoring all comers, be they dwarf or lizardman! Surely, this puts to bed the disgusting and obviously untrue rumours of a defeat by goblins, which I assume was spread by agents of the Witch King.

In other news, the Shirikins, Klaxxi, and DarkStones stand out as true playmakers in a league of brutes, each having a player with three completions, so there may be hope yet. I even heard of a dwarf "runner" who seeks to be a passing specialist, the idea of which has already given me a season's worth of undignified laughter.

HAPPY ST. PATRICK'S DAY AFTER MORNING

Due to the buffoonery and negligence of the writers of the Fractured Leg last night, they forgot to write an article to fill in today's paper. So you, our loyal followers and frothing Blood Bowl fans, get this piece of fluffy, useless, meaningless news that the staff here are unreliable. But you probably already knew that, so let us focus on the festivities. As per tradition the Kazan-Zizko Four-Foot-Niners, brought out the strongest green beer they had, and hung decorations made of dead Greenskins from the bleachers. I realize that may sound a little misleading, no, the greenskins were not spectators, they were players, and the corpses dangled off the place where you go when you drop your scrying orb through the seats. Quite horrifying really. And with that we have enough words to fill an article! We here at the Fractured Leg hope you had a safe, and much more responsible night than we did. Happy St. Patrick's day!

Learning From a Professional

A coach with a large amount of experience in the game of Blood Bowl is Coach Beveridge. Just look at how far his teams have gone in the past with all-stars like the Nuln Widowmakers, the Dagger Squadron, and Don Mortis. All of these teams have made it too play-offs and choked! An impressive accomplishment, but how has he made it this far time after time? The answer is simple, drugs, and lots of them. If there is any coach that knows how to convince his players that 'Roids are the way to go, it's him. Just look at the Dagger Squadron, sure most of his players that doped are now dead, but they we're legendarily fast and agile, remember the terror on the pitch that was Zed? At least until he was clocked by a Saurus. This madman coach/chemist was so determined to make his players done that he even made drugs that worked on the undead! Just look at Mad Dog of Don Mortis! That is a Wight like none before, throwing, dodging and scoring like an elf. This season Beveridge is working with a rookie

Skaven team called Dance of the Drunken rat, and I expect that when they aren't drink they will be doping. Look forward to seeing rats the size of black orcs terrorizing the Orca-Cola division. And if you rookie coaches ever need advice as to how to improve your team this season, just look up to coach Beveridge and think "Drugs are always the answer"
